

Fixed Income Strategist

Fixed income markets move fast, and clear, well-grounded analysis makes a real difference to the decisions clients and colleagues rely on every day. As a Fixed Income Strategist in our Fixed Income and FX Research team in Copenhagen, you will help shape the views we share with corporate and institutional clients across Europe. This is a role for someone with genuine curiosity and a commercial mindset.

What you will be doing

You will be part of a collaborative research team that works closely with Macro Research colleagues and strategists across our hubs. The team produces analysis that feeds directly into client decisions, and you will be a close sparring partner for both corporate and institutional clients. The atmosphere is open and collegial, with a shared commitment to rigorous, well-communicated research.

More specifically, you will:

- Produce interest rate forecasts and develop well-reasoned trading ideas
- Provide hedging recommendations to corporate and institutional clients
- Contribute to daily commentary on market developments and trends
- Represent our market views in client meetings and media appearances
- Collaborate with Macro Research and strategists across our hubs

About you

- Solid macroeconomic background with knowledge of EUR markets and ECB policy
- Experience producing fixed income research or interest rate analysis
- Strong communicator, able to tailor messages to different audiences
- Comfortable working independently and contributing within a team

- Analytical mindset with the ability to translate complex data into clear recommendations

If you also have experience with FX research or broader cross-asset analysis, that is a welcome addition. We value curiosity and a genuine interest in markets as much as formal credentials.

What we offer you

You will join a team that takes research seriously and values open discussion. We work in a hybrid model with three to four days per week in our Copenhagen office, giving you the benefits of in-person collaboration alongside flexibility. You will have the opportunity to develop your skills across asset classes, learn from experienced colleagues, and grow your profile both internally and externally.
