

Business Analyst for Everyday Banking Corporate

We are looking for Business Analysts to join our teams and support and facilitate the product development across our portfolio of products for our corporate customers in collaboration with stakeholders, customers and the rest of the team. Anchored in Copenhagen, Aarhus and India, you will join a growing team in the Everyday Banking Corporate organization with more than 170 skilled colleagues based out of Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Finland, Lithuania, and India.

What you will be doing

As a Business Analyst, your primary role will be to ensure the product development of our solutions. That means you take lead on creating innovative solutions within your area of our portfolio into vision you set in collaboration with the team and our customers. We will be utilizing your analytical approach, great stakeholder management skills and methodologies to ensure that your area is continuously growing and improving to support our customers daily.

- Drive design of new solutions in collaboration with the team, collecting requirements from internal stakeholders and customers
- Drive pilots of new products with customers
- Roll out new products to customers across the Nordics
- Stakeholder management
- Prepare and facilitate meetings and workshops with relevant stakeholders
- Plan business analysis, approach and activities
- Support the team in continuous improving their way of working

Furthermore, you have the ability to identify, flag and proactively handle potential risks within a task or project. Hence, you see the overall picture and continuously seek to improve standard processes related to the business analysis discipline.

About you

We are looking for someone who takes ownership, is proactive and delivers innovative customer experience. One who follows market trends and customer needs and translate that into next generation products and features. Success in this role requires strong interpersonal skills and the ability to work effectively with people at every level of the organization

- Collaboration skills in cross-functional team across countries
- Advanced written and verbal communication skills in English
- Solid problem solving skills in complex settings
- Strong project management and stakeholder management skills
- Well-recognized ability to work interdependently with several team members
- Clear customer focus during all work you do
- Effective and efficient decision-making skills in an ever changing environment
- Experience in working in an agile and scrum set-up

We see you as someone who brings experience and a solid background in the area of design of IT solutions, business analysis and customer experience. Additionally, you have great interpersonal skills and consider yourself a keen collaborator. You are motivated to learn and enjoy taking initiatives and are comfortable with the responsibility that follows.

Most importantly, you are proactive and proficient at working closely with diverse teams. You take ownership and deliver tasks through to completion

What we offer you

You will join a growing international team with opportunities for career progression and continuous learning. Based in Copenhagen you can enjoy our hybrid work model, spending 3 to 4 days per week in the office to build relationships and collaborate effectively.
